A portrait of the Virgin and Child, supported by Cherubs with a Flower Garland

This collaboration between 2 important Flemish painters (Seghers painted the flowers, Schut was responsible for the putti and cartouche) resulted in a beautiful painting with an exceptional story.

Hairs related our work to work "nr 119" from Daniel Seghers' inventory. This work was described in the diary of Philippe Chifflet (someone from the entourage of Cardinal Infante Ferdinand of Spain). Chifflet noted that Ferdinand visited Seghers in his studio where this work was presented to him (See: G. Wilmers, Corneli Schut (1597-1655): a Flemish Painter of the High Baroque, Belgium 1996, pp. 172-73).

We see a fantastic collaboration between 2 specialists in their genre: Schut's free "Rubenesque" figuration is broken by Segher's hyperrealism and bright use of colour. Although the 2 painters retain their individuality and their own style, they reinforce each other in this work and build a composition together. (Schut and Seghers worked together several times during this period, resulting in several cartouches with putti).

Our work has had several exhibitions and is extensively described in the literature (see below).

Oil on canvas, 127 x 104cm
